INDEX TO HISTORICAL INDUSTRIAL RECORD OF THE PRAIRIE CITY

The Historical Industrial Record of the Prairie City, published in October 1900, was a souvenir edition of the Terre Haute Express, celebrating the 77th anniversary of the establishment of the newspaper. According to the Express, the souvenir edition contained "some history of the settlement and growth of the city, displaying its commercial advantages, and its social and industrial institutions...issued as a Prospectus of Terre Haute in the State of Indiana, for the pleasure and profit of its good and prosperous people." The Record includes biographical sketches of many prominent local men, histories of businesses and organizations, and numerous photographs of people, buildings, and local scenes.

The Special Collections staff has compiled an index to subjects and to names of people, places, and things (such as institutions and organizations) mentioned in the Record. Each entry gives name or subject, page number, column number, and whether there is a photograph. An asterisk * indicates the presence of a photo. A page number with no columns noted, plus an asterisk *, indicates that there is only a photo. A page number in brackets [] means that the page is unnumbered in the Record.

The bound volume of the Historical Industrial Record has been microfilmed and removed to the Archives due to its deteriorated condition. The microfilm has been cataloged under the number 338.097:H, and prints may be made from the film. It should be noted that at some time in the past librarians at the Emeline Fairbanks Memorial Library pasted columns from a copy of the Record into a scrapbook which has also been microfilmed and cataloged as 338.097:H. The page numbers in the scrapbook DO NOT correspond with the page numbers in the bound volume used for this index. Researchers should be careful to use the correct microfilm reel.
